If you answered 'yes' to questions 1-4 above, you may claim financial independence and should send your own information, not your parents. NB: if your 1040 Tax Return shows earnings under $15,000, it is difficult to believe you have no financial support.

In this case you also need to send your parents' 1040 Tax Returns. If your parents are divorced, send both. If parent with whom you live show less than $15,000 earnings on 1040 Tax Return, include stepparent's 1040 Tax Returns as well as divorced parents'.

If you answered 'no' to questions 5-10 above, you may not claim financial independence and should send your parents' information, not yours.

Note: Please black out all Social Security numbers.

I have answered the above questions truthfully.
